Paris and American Millinery.

There is unusual beauty to the Hats we show this season. Materials and the graceful styles that fashion h s chosen help to the beautiful effects. Our work rooms are in such close touch with our Paris office that every new idea that Paris skill devises is reproduced here in about a week after it appears there. Refined and stylish hats, yet prices are most reasonable.

A delightful variety of Flowers for millinery trimming. And the Fruits share equal prominence with the flowers and foilage - Cherries, Grapes, Gooseberries, etc., and all wonderfully true to nature. Fruits are · Millinery novelties in many odd and exclusive effects.

The New Oxfords for Spring.

One Oxford seems very much like another, but in reality there is very wide variation. A little betterment may change an awkward Oxford to the most graceful-may make discomfort into the most easy-fit-

These are the changes from the usual that give Woodward & Lothrop Oxfords their pre-eminence.

Handsome, comfortable, fairly priced.

The styles this spring tend toward the lighter and more graceful

The broad shapes are modified, and the heels are higher, to give a more graceful poise to the costumes of the season.

Among those present were the president of the National Society of Colonial Dames, Mrs. Justine Van Ransselaer Townsend, Mrs. Livingston Jones, Mrs. Daniel Manning, Mrs. Wm. Bacon Stevens, Miss Rodney, Mrs. Werplanck, Mrs. Craven, Mrs. McIlvaine, Mrs. DuPont, Miss Ridgely, Mrs. Hale, Mrs. Blake, Mrs. Pringle, Mrs. Miles, Miss Rasenel, Mrs. Calborne, Mrs. Gilham, Mrs. Colt of Connecticut, and Mrs. F. Bowditch Dexter. The guests were received by the Countess Esterhazy, nee Carroll, the first vice president of the society in Washington, assisted by Mrs. Cropper, Mrs. Violet Blair Janin, Mrs. James M. Johnston, Miss Fairfax, Mrs. A. T. Brice, Mrs. Van Rensselaer and others. Among different members of the home society present were Mrs. Richey, Mrs. Addison, Miss Peter, Miss Tayloe Snyder, Miss E. Washington and Mrs. Swann. The absence of the president, Mrs. B. Wellington Kennon, a great-granddaughter of Martha Washington, was deeply regretted. During the present week these ladies and their guests will be royally entertained. Mrs. John R. MoLean has invited the cabinet, many of the diplomatic corps, Admiral and Mrs. Dewey and other friends to meet the National Colonial Dames at a reception, April 27, which will be among the most brilliant entertainments
